A Gamer's Journal for keeping one's campaign follies, fiends, friends and fights!

By Patrick Ciraco

It is really great to see someone putting out a genuine booklet that aspires to meet the considerations of the gamer chronicler. That player who loves to settle into the role of recording the adventure for prosperity, reference, the trials and triumphs and tragedies. The gamer's journal is well presented and at 50 pages meets the needs of a light to medium styled campaign....anything larger would fall to the 100 page journal. A style and class added that I enjoy to see at my game table of over 35 years of adventure! Good binding and a means of keeping it all together. Recommended.

Beautiful Adventure Journal

By Lady-Sanctuary

I always struggle with keeping track of where my group and myself are in campaigns, and even if I write it all down it always ends up getting lost. But this gorgeous journal is perfect. It's perfectly formatted as an adventure journal and a joy to use. Prompt delivery and lovely service means I would wholeheartedly recommend this to any D&D or tabletop RPG group.

Exactly what it says on the tin

By Keith Preston

Sure, you could do the exact same thing in a standard notepad, but why not do it in style?

I got this through Kickstarter, and it was exactly how it was promised: a nice, thematic book to track the next epic adventure I wind up in (looking to be Pendragon at this rate)!
