Review

Director Nick Alcott and his cast create an adrenaline-charged pace in Gore Vidal's 1960 political drama (revived in 2000) about the backstage maneuvering of a presidential convention. On- and off-the-record conversations unfold quickly and meaningfully as candidate Bill Russell (Fred Thompson) seeks to win his party's nomination without surrendering his self-respect. The play, even after 44 years, is a smart little gem, and the performance effectively captures its various moods, moving smoothly between satire and drama and always skewering the national habit of instinctive dissembling. The only intermittent weakness is Fred Thompson, who sounds a bit lifeless in some important scenes, but the ensemble acting is consistently fine. -AudioFile Magazine

THE BEST MAN BY GORE VIDAL, GORE VIDAL PDF

The Best Man crackles with the smart lines and situations inherent to the work of Gore Vidal. The political intrigues rampant in Vidals 1960 setting are strangely similar to the political intrigues of the present day. This darkly satirical drama finds two presidential contenders seeking the endorsement of an aging ex-president and explores how personal agendas can change the course of a nations destiny.

Western historical romance

By S. Rayball

Do you know that line in books where the main male character is super impressed by the female character who stoically succeeds at the monumental task they have no training or experience and some how does it incredibly well and better than everyone else... "Any other woman would be crying and complaining about now..." Well this is the exact opposite of those kind of stories! These women just suffer through everything hating and crying through almost the entire story. I couldn't read it again but by the time you get to the end you really feel like you been through everything with them.

MUST READ!

By ladycruella13

I've read romance novels for over 30 years. I will never forget the cattle drive I went on with the Roark sisters. Thank you, Maggie Osborne, for the most wonderful, empowering journey!
